

Boundary Hill Lodge

Rating: 6/10

Price guide: price on request

Boundary Hill Lodge is located just outside Tarangire national park in northern Tanzania.

Sited on a hillside overlooking the reserve, this camp certainly has some drama.

Approaching rear, public areas sit at the top of the hill. They feature a rather unusual blend of natural stone and local bricks and are reasonably pleasant, if a little cold. The rooms are arranged at various levels across the hill, some dramatically perched above sheer drops. They are rather more welcoming, reasonable decor and big picture windows providing great views.

The lodge is part owned by the local community, which in return has set aside a considerable area of land for wildlife.

Boundary Hill Lodge is potentially a very nice facility, but one which remains marginal, largely due to the distance between here in the core game viewing areas inside the reserve.
