

Stanley's Kopje Camp

Stanley's Kopje Camp is located in Mikumi national park in southern Tanzania.

Previously known as Foxes Safari Camp, this lodge was completely rebuilt in 2011 and now takes full advantage of its commanding position on a hill overlooking broad grassy plains.

The camp comprises public areas housed under a rather outsized thatched roof, with pool and campfire also atop the hill. A dozen rooms are ranged around the slopes of the hill, most with expansive views. There is an active waterhole in view, with giraffe and elephant being notable regular sightings.

For guests arriving by air, the presence of the main road through the park is barely an issue, it being almost 5km distant from camp and with vehicle safaris heading out in the opposite direction.

Stanley's Kopje Camp may be a peripheral choice on a flying safari, but it is certainly the top choice when over landing between Ruaha and Selous or tripping out from Dar Es Salaam on the weekend.